RESULTS FROM THE OHIO EXPER-IMENT STATION.

Gain in Experimenting With Small Fruits-Strawberries, Raspberries and Blackberries Under Different

There has been a decided change in the relative standing of varieties of strawberries within the last few years. Not many years ago the Wilson took the lead among market sorts, while for the past five or six years the same place has been accorded the Crescent. The latter variety has by no means been superceeded, nor has it best on decline in vigor or productiveness, but varieties have recently been produced that are equal to it and in some respects superior. This gives fruit growers added advantages, because of a longer list from which to choose, enabling them to select varieties suited to particular purposes.

The following list does not give all that have been tested, but those only that are of greatest general interest. Haverland—This variety is one of the most promising of recent introduc-tion. It has been before the public but Billy Sheffield, of Deshler, Ohio, is a first-class workman. We recommend him to out readers as an honest man and blacksmith.

Disclare Terms over Apolitic. It is not quite so early in rispening, but the berries are larger and finer in appearance. Scarcely an unfavorable report has been heard of this variety from any section of the country. It may not be equal to some other sorts for distant shipment, but for near market it is unsurpassed. Fruit growers who have not planted the Haverland need have no fear in doing so, as it seldom happens that a variety fails in any particular locality when it succeeds ovparticular locality when it succeeds over a wide area.

Bubach—This variety is remarkable for its healthy dark green foliage, being distinct from all other varieties in coior of leaf and general appearance of plant. The berries are large, somewhat cock-combed, rather soft and not extra cock-combed, rather soft and not extra in quality. In productiveness the bubach rank, a little below crescent and haverland, but the berries are larger than either of the kinds named. Many growers who dispose of their crop in near markets place this variety at the head of the list, but experience with it at the station shows that the berries are not uniformly large rendering sortare not uniformly large, rendering sort-ing necessary. It must be classed with what are known as "show berries" in which class it takes high rank. As re-gards its value as a market berry much depends upon the demands of the par-ticular market for which it is designed. Where extra fine berries command a a price according to the grade, the bu-bach will prove one of the most profit-able, but in less discriminating markets it will fall considerably below crescent and haverland, Warfield—The most marked charac-teristic of this variety is its shipping qualities, ranking the highest of those named in this particular. The plants are vigorous and productive; berries medium in size, and of fair quality. Those who grow for near market only will find this variety less satisfactory than the above named, except when it is desirable to hold the berries some time after being picked. It has a place, time after being picked. It has a place, which it fills very satisfactory, but for near markets it is not equal to any of the three varieties named above.

The above varieties stand at the head of the list for market purposes of those that have been fully tested. They are all of the class that bear imperfect flowers, and must be planted near other varieties that furnish pollen. There September 9th and 23d, and October 14th, to er varieties that furnish pollen. There are no perfect flowering varieties known that are equal in productiveness to those of the above list. The followto those of the above list. The following are usually planted for the purpose of furnishing pollen, and are among the best of those tested at the station: Miner, Cumberland, Jessie, Sharpless. Of those not fully tested, but appear to be very promising: Enhance and Michel's Early may be named. el's Early may be named.

It should be clearly understood by those about to plant that it is not advisable to set any more of the perfect flowering sorts than is necessary. About one fifth of the total number is the rule usually allowed.

The varieties thus far named are particularly recommended for market purs, but any or all will prove satisfactory for home use. If quality alone is considered, the following are the best that can be named: Cumberland, Jes-sie, Sharpless, Lida, Belmont and Hen-

RASPBERBIES.

There has been no such change in the list of raspberries as with straw-berries. Nearly the same varieties stand at the head of the list as held that position five years ago. Of the black caps the best that can be named are Tyler, Ohio, Hilborn and Gregg, given in the order of earliness. The Palmer is much like the Tyler perhaps being an improvement in vigor and produc-tiveness. The best of the red sorts are Marlboro, Shaffer, Reliance and Cuthbert. The best for home use of the whole list is the Shaffer. A variety called the Muskingum resembles the Shaffer and is superior to it for market purposes, being firmer, but is no better for home use. Neither the Reliance nor Cuthbert succeed in all localities, but where they are at home are very profitable. The Cuthbert is the latest of the reds, and the turner the earliest L.R.Siford's City Tonsorial Parlors, of those named. Taylor and Erie are larger but less hardy. Agawan is the sweetest one on the list. Some call it insipid while many prefer it to any other variety. other variety.

How Much Wheat Per Acre?

The average wheat raiser in this country grows from twelve to thirteen bushels per acre, and this year will not reach even that very unsatisfactory yield. The time has been when, even with these figures wheat growing has been profitable; but that time is past. If the business is to pay again the profits must accrue to those who produce twenty, twenty-five and thirty or more bushels ber acre. There are men and not a few of them, who reach these figures, and can show them as average results of the work of a term of years. Why cannot all do so?—Pittsburg Stockman. FINK .- Mrs. Hattie C. Fink, daughter of Mary A Putt, died at the home of her mother, in Napoleon Ohio, Sunday morning, August 24th, 1890 at 4:25, of inflammation of the stomach, aged 45 years and 24 days. Funeral services were held at the M. E. Church Tuesday at 2:36 p. m., conducted by Rev. T. Campbell, after which her remains were quietly laid away in Glenwood cemetery.

Hattie, as she was familiarly called by her many friends and acquaintances, had for a number of years been a great sufferer of a complication of seases which baffled all medical science, under which she bore up without a murmer, claiming as she did, that if there was no cure for her on earth ere was a lasting cure in heaven. She was con fined to herbed but a few days, her sufferings be ing intense, but at no time did she hesitate to talk of that Beautiful Land. When asked if she was willing to leave this world of pain and sorrow, her answer was: Yes, Glory be to God, I have a home in Heaven," and calling her friends to her bed-sid she earnestly beseached them to meet her there. A few hours before the messenger of death entered her chamber, her power of speech had left her and took its flight to warn the loved ones gone before of the coming of a daughter and eister, and often ier hands were raised in the attitude of prayer, and beckening to those that she would soon join.

A peaceful smile settled upon her countenance, her ands folded to her breast, and her soul took its flight to that Land from whence it came.

Hattie had for a number of years been a faithful ember of the United Brethren Church and died in the full belief of a redeeming love. In her death the church loses a true and devout christian, a sisters a kind and loving stater. May she rest in
